

What is the Purpose of Brainstorming Before Working on Dissertation

SI

Essays become the bane of existence for many students. More often than not, the acrimonious relationship between students and academic writing is a product of a lack of practice and understanding of the right techniques to make academic writing fun and easy!

If you are rolling your eyes at the thought of your essays being anything but bothersome tasks, you would rather sweep under the rug, you need to think twice. Maybe it's the habit of sweeping them under the rug that has gotten you to the point where you think you and academic writing are utterly incompatible. You are ready to settle with the notion that academic writing can never be your cup of tea. Or coffee. Or any means of getting a caffeine hit you may have resorted to, because of that thumping heading you get each time you sit down to write. This is what I would believe when I write my essay and I want to make it perfect! I would take matters into my own hands and make an effort to change the way I approach essays!

Read, Read, Read...

It all begins with reading and research. Often, it is not surprising to see how keen readers are the ones who end up being the best academic writers. These are the people who don't seem to have the problems, as others do. Reason is that the more extensively you read, the greater chances there would be of you possessing ideas and then being eloquent enough to put these ideas into practice.

You need to divest yourself of the notion that you simply can't write better. Every admirable and expert essay writer of today had been nothing but a fledgling amateur at some point in their life. There is nothing you "can't" do if you work smart and hard. Assign yourself some reading tasks every day. To start with, read anything you can and would want to read. Find anything you'd be interested in and read away!

When you feel you have read as much as you could and now is the time for you to start planning the actual writing process, you need to sit down with a blank piece of paper and a pen. Then, the world is your oyster and the sky's the limit!

Be Creative...

Don't think that what you writing is right or wrong. Sketch it in the form of a mind map as it comes to you. Brainstorm a topic if you don't already have one. After you have your topic, you need to work on developing ideas about your topic and letting those ideas flow. The brainstorming session is supposed to be an uninhibited prewriting activity that guides you in the right direction.

Soon enough, you will notice your mind coming up with different ideas when your professors assign you essays. The real problem, now, would be to train your mind to become more adept at organizing ideas. Organizing ideas and being able to logically connect them takes you almost to a well-conceived custom essay writing service. This is where brainstorming comes in.

Often, when you have read and researched, your thoughts tend to organize themselves along logical lines. Your brain would naturally want to logically relate the ideas and fill any holes. So, let your instincts take over and sketch a mind map that represents the content you need to write along with the order you need to write it in.

Procrastination Definitely Won't Help...

Brainstorming needs to be done when you still have ample time. When deadlines are creeping closer and you are left with few days, brainstorming will not be engaging, stress-relieving, and productive activity it is supposed to be. The more you delay it, the more chances are there that you will eventually skip brainstorming, altogether. Skipping prewriting is the reason most of the students can't write to the best of their abilities.

When you rush through a college essay, you make your writing suffer from less engaging ideas that are poorly put together. A lack of coherence is never a problem that represents severe shortcoming you may personally have as far as your writing is concerned. It is generally matter of about few minutes or hours.

It does not require you to work harder, this is where the idea of working smart comes in. It is not about the quantity of the time you spend while checking through the list of prewriting activities, it is rather about the quality of the time you spend in prewriting. Brainstorming itself is the best example of working smart. If you skip it, you skip the chance to turn your essay from a doleful collection of wandering thoughts to a well-linked and cogent piece of quality writing.

Brainstorming could be the difference between an essay that is just not there, yet, and an essay that is on point. Who wouldn't want that? Make sure you learn to manage time and avoid overworking yourself at the eleventh hour. Instead, you could begin all the prewriting steps well in time and see the magic happen right in front of your eyes! You won't believe how easy writing essays can be and how well you can write. It does not have to be a burden. It can be fun and gratifying. Be ready to get there one step at a time.

Brainstorming will lead you to develop the best outline ever. Once you have done this a few times, you will be on your way to becoming a pro! Speaking of pros, you can have all the help you need to write a killer essay if you seek a quality online essay writing service that allows you to access the best assistance for the most nominal of cost! Make sure you don't let time pass you by and do all you can to write the perfect essay!